Parking lot USB exercise

Contents	The contents on the usb discovered in the parking lot belong to Jorge Bailey, Human Resource Manager at Rhetorical Hospital. It ranges from pet pictures to wedding information to the hospital employees new hire letters and budget information. There is pii on the drive and other sensitive information for Mr. Bailey personally and the hospital.
Attacker mindset	The information could easily cause damage if the wrong person found it. Employees could get upset about learning how much money another employee is being paid, the hospital could be at risk of having a competing hospital obtain the budget information and leaking it, and a disgruntled employee could cause damage with both the hospital and Mr. Bailey's personal information on the drive.
Risk analysis	If the usb drive had contained a malicious drive that is used to infect the whole system when installed and it had been discovered by anyone else who didn't have access to the virtual machine it could have infected the whole system in the hospital and the clinics connected to the hospital server. This could have caused a major event by leaking information protected by HIPPA. It is important that every employee understands that if they were to find a usb drive not to plug it in to anything and to turn it over to IT or the cybersecurity team without trying to look at the contents.
